This Marist Poll Reports:

Bloomberg Approval Rating at 58%

New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg's approval rating may have waned a bit back in February, but by the looks of The Marist Poll's new citywide survey, the mayor is on solid ground. 58% of registered New York City voters report Bloomberg is doing either an excellent or good job in office while 40% say he is performing fairly well or poorly. The mayor received similar ratings when Marist last asked this question in May. At that time, the mayor rebounded from Marist's February survey when he received a lower, albeit still strong, approval rating -- 52%.

Although Bloomberg's approval rating crosses party lines, race comes into play. 68% of white voters and 64% of Latino voters give the mayor above average marks. This compares with just 37% of African American voters who share this view.

What does the electorate think about the city's trajectory? A majority is positive about the city's path. 52% report the city is moving in the right direction. This is compared with 38% who believe the opposite is true. Similar proportions of voters said the same in Marist's May survey.

"Hard Working, Knows Our Problems, and a Good Leader, But Caring Mayor...
Mike Is Not," Says Voters

As in The Marist Poll's May survey, voters in the Big Apple say they like Mike! 78% of the electorate thinks Bloomberg is working hard as mayor, 68% report he is a good leader for New York City, and 70% think Mayor Bloomberg has a firm grasp on the problems facing the city.

Voters have a different perception of Bloomberg, however, when it comes to being a mayor who cares about the average New Yorker. Here, the mayor fails to receive a majority of voters who believe he cares about people like them. In fact, the electorate divides with 48% saying Bloomberg is an empathetic mayor and 46% who disagree. In May, half of voters said the mayor cares about people like them.

Majority Approves of Bloomberg's Handling of City Schools, Economic Crisis, & Crime... Other Areas Need Work

The New York State Senate's legislative inaction has taken control of the New York City public schools out of Mayor Bloomberg's hands. But, according to a majority -- 53% -- of New York City voters, Mayor Bloomberg was doing a good job handling the schools. 38% disagree. When it comes to money matters, 51% report they like the way Mayor Bloomberg is dealing with the city's economic crisis. This is compared with 40% who disagree. And, looking at the way the mayor is dealing with the city's budget, 49% approve of Bloomberg's plan while 41% disapprove.

On the issue of taxes, however, the tides turn against Mayor Bloomberg. A plurality of the city's electorate -- 49% -- disapproves of how Mr. Bloomberg is addressing the situation. 44% approve. The mayor also needs to score some points on the question of public transportation. Here, a majority -- 56% -- say they do not like how the mayor is handling the issue while 39% think Bloomberg is dealing with the matter well. In all of these areas, the mayor received similar ratings in May.

Since that May survey, there has been a slight dip in the proportion of voters who approve of how Bloomberg is handling crime in New York City. Although nearly three-quarters of the electorate -- 74% -- currently support the mayor's methods, 78% said the same two months ago.

Majority Says Elect New Mayor...But, Even More Think Bloomberg Will Win Third Term

51% of registered voters in New York City say, "Out with the old and in with the new." That's the proportion of the electorate who believes it's time to oust Mayor Michael Bloomberg from office and elect someone else. 44% of voters think Mayor Bloomberg deserves to be re-elected. In The Marist Poll's May survey, voters were more divided with 48% reporting it's time to elect a new mayor and 47% saying Bloomberg should get a third term.

However, regardless of whether voters support a third term for Bloomberg, more than seven in ten voters --73% -- think the mayor will be re-elected. This is compared with just one-fifth of the electorate who believes Bloomberg will not be re-elected. These findings are virtually unchanged from May.

Campaign 2009...Bloomberg Loses Ground Against Thompson...Commanding Lead Over Avella

What are the odds that Mayor Michael Bloomberg will be re-elected in November? According to two hypothetical scenarios, pretty good. Here's how the competition stacks up. When pitted against Democratic City Comptroller Bill Thompson, Bloomberg leads Thompson 48% to 35%. Although Bloomberg does have a solid lead over Thompson, he has lost majority support, and the race is closer. When Marist last asked this question in May, Bloomberg received 51% to Thompson's 33%.

When matched against Democratic City Council Member Tony Avella, Bloomberg leads Avella 53% to 29%. Both politicians received similar proportions of the electorate in May when Bloomberg garnered 52% to Avella's 27%.

Dems Back Thompson for Democratic Nomination...More Than One-Third Unsure

Now that Democratic Congressman Anthony Weiner has announced he will not seek the Democratic nomination for New York City Mayor, is there a clear challenger to square off against Michael Bloomberg? According to this Marist Poll, Bill Thompson receives 47% of New York City Democrats' support while Tony Avella garners 18%. 35% are unsure.

Weiner's withdrawal from the race has benefitted Thompson the most. In Marist's May survey, Thompson received 29% of the vote to Avella's 8%. Weiner was the leader at that time with 34% of the vote. 29% of Democrats were unsure.

Bloomberg's Billions Make No Difference

Do voters care that Mayor Bloomberg intends to spend millions of his own dollars in order to be re-elected this fall? The short answer is, "No." Just 11% report it will make them more likely to vote for the mayor while 24% say it will make them less likely to support him. Nearly two-thirds of voters -- 65% -- say it will not make any difference to them. However, that is an 8 percentage point drop since Marist last asked this question. Two months ago, 73% said Bloomberg's spending would not impact their vote.

Green Light Among Democrats in Race for Public Advocate

Former New York City Public Advocate Mark Green would win handily if this year's Democratic primary for Public Advocate were held today but falls just short of the 40% needed to avoid a runoff. 39% of Democrats say they would support him while 16% report they would back Civil Rights Attorney Norman Siegel. City Council Members Bill de Blasio and Eric Gioia receive 9% and 8%, respectively. 28% of Democrats are unsure. Each potential candidate received similar proportions of the vote back in May.

Marist Poll July 2009
NYC Registered Voter Tables

Nature of the Sample: 845 New York City Registered Voters

This survey was conducted on June 29th through July 1st, 2009. 845 registered voters were interviewed by telephone in proportion to the voter registration in each borough in New York City and adjusted for turnout in citywide elections. The results for the entire survey are statistically significant at $\pm 3.5\%$. There are 514 Democrats. The results for this subsample are statistically significant at $\pm 4.5\%$. The error margin increases for cross-tabulations.
