This NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist Poll reports:

The clock is counting down to Election Day, and in this final NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist Poll, Democrat Bill de Blasio has a very wide lead over Republican Joe Lhota among New York City likely voters including those who are undecided yet leaning toward a candidate and those who voted by absentee ballot. De Blasio has the support of 65% of likely voters while Lhota receives 24%. Independence candidate Adolfo Carrion has 4% while 1% of likely voters citywide wants another candidate to be elected. Six percent are undecided.

“Bill de Blasio continues to be the overwhelming favorite with New York City voters while Joe Lhota can’t get any traction,” says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. “Even a Peyton Manning fourth quarter comeback wouldn’t be enough to close this large gap.”

When NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist reported this question last month, 67% of likely voters citywide supported de Blasio. 23% backed Lhota while Carrion had the support of 2%. One percent was for another candidate, and 7% were undecided.

By party:

- Among Democrats who are likely to vote, 79% are for de Blasio compared with 14% for Lhota and 2% for Carrion. In October, 82% backed de Blasio while 13% were for Lhota. One percent was behind Carrion.

*All references to the survey must be sourced as “NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist Poll”

- When it comes to likely Republican voters, 71% are for Lhota while 21% are for de Blasio. Three percent support Carrion. In that previous survey, 69% of likely Republican voters backed Lhota while 16% were for de Blasio, and 1% supported Carrion.
- Among non-enrolled voters who are likely to cast a ballot, 50% support de Blasio. 29% are for Lhota while 11% back Carrion. Last month, 58% of likely non-enrolled voters were for de Blasio compared with 21% for Lhota. Seven percent, at that time, backed Carrion.

Regardless of race, de Blasio receives, at least, majority support. Among African American voters who are likely to cast a ballot, 90% support de Blasio. Lhota and Carrion each receives 2%. 72% of Latino voters are for de Blasio while 10% are for Lhota, and 9% back Carrion. Among likely voters who are white, 53% support de Blasio, 39% back Lhota, and 2% are for Carrion.

Before last Wednesday's debate, 65% of likely voters supported de Blasio while 24% were for Lhota. Carrion received the support of 4% while 1% wanted another candidate to be mayor. Six percent were undecided. After the debate, 65% supported de Blasio while 24% were for Lhota. Three percent backed Carrion while 1% were for another candidate. Seven percent were undecided.

"The debate season has come and gone," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. "But, the debates this fall have done more to reinforce voters' impressions of the candidates than to change the character of the race."

How strongly do likely voters citywide support their choice of candidate? 61% say they strongly support their selection for mayor while 30% are somewhat committed to their choice. Eight percent might vote differently, and 1% is unsure.

When NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist last reported this question, 54% said they were firmly committed to their choice of candidate. 36% reported they were somewhat behind their pick, and 9% said they might vote differently. Two percent were unsure.

65% of likely voters who support de Blasio say they will not waver in their commitment to him. This compares with 54% of likely voters who back Lhota and say they are strongly committed to him. Last month, 56% of de Blasio's backers reported they strongly supported him while 49% of Lhota's backers had a similar level of intensity.

Among registered voters including those who are undecided yet leaning toward a candidate and those who voted by absentee ballot, de Blasio -- 63% -- is ahead of Lhota -- 21% -- by

In October, 59% thought de Blasio's ideology was in line. 24% reported he was too liberal while 3% said he was too conservative. 14% were unsure.

When it comes to Lhota's political ideology, 34% say his ideology is about right. 35% believe Lhota is too conservative while 8% say Lhota is too liberal. 23% are unsure. Last month, 35% of registered voters reported Lhota's ideology was about right. 31% said he was too conservative while only 8% believed he was too liberal. 26%, then, were unsure.

Time for Change, Say More than Six in Ten

64% of registered voters want the next mayor to move the city in a different direction while 31% want him to continue Mayor Michael Bloomberg's policies. Six percent are unsure. There has been little change since NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist's October survey. At that time, 66% wanted a departure from Bloomberg's policies. 29% reported they thought the city's current policies should be continued, and 6% were unsure.

So, how do voters think Bloomberg is doing in office? 47% say he is doing either an excellent or good job in office. This includes 13% who believe he is doing an excellent job and 34% who think he is doing a good one. 29% rate Bloomberg's approval rating as fair while 20% report he is performing poorly. Three percent are unsure.

Last month, 45% gave Bloomberg high marks. 34% said he was doing a fair job while 18% thought Bloomberg's job performance was subpar. Two percent were unsure.

The City's Course

49% of registered voters think New York City is moving in the right direction while 42% believe it is moving in the wrong one. Nine percent are unsure. When NBC 4 New York/Wall Street Journal/Marist last reported this question, 46% of voters thought the city was traveling on the right road while 46% said it needed a new path. Eight percent were unsure.

How the Survey was Conducted

Nature of the Sample: NBC 4 NY/WSJ/Marist Poll of 1,354 New York City Adults

This survey of 1,354 New York City adults was conducted October 29th through November 1st, 2013 by The Marist Poll sponsored in partnership with NBC 4 New York and The Wall Street Journal. Adults 18 years of age and older residing in New York City were interviewed by telephone using live interviewers. Landline telephone numbers were randomly selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the city from ASDE Survey Sampler, Inc. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each borough was represented in proportion to its population. To increase coverage, this landline sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of cell phone numbers from Survey Sampling International. The samples were then combined and balanced to reflect the 2010 Census results for age, gender, income, race, and borough. Interviews were conducted in English or Spanish. Respondents in the household were selected by asking for the youngest male. Results for adults are statistically significant within ± 2.7 percentage points. There are 1,046 registered voters. Results for this subset are statistically significant within ± 3.0 percentage points. There are 530 likely voters defined by a probability turnout model. This model determines the likelihood respondents will vote in the 2013 election for mayor based upon their chance of vote, interest in the election, and past election participation. The results for this subset are statistically significant within ± 4.3 percentage points. The error margin increases for cross-tabulations.
