This NBC 4 New York/Marist Poll Reports:

A second term for New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio is in clear sight. If de Blasio were primaried by fellow New York City Democrats, he leaves his potential competition in the dust. Among New York City Democrats, 40% support de Blasio. New York City Comptroller Scott Stringer and former New York City Council Speaker Christine Quinn tie for a distant second with 9% each. Bronx Borough President Ruben Diaz, Jr., 8%, and New York City Public Advocate Letitia James, 6%, follow. U.S. Representative Hakeem Jeffries receives 2%, and New York State Senator Tony Avella and former New York City Councilmember Sal Albanese receive 1% each. Less than one percent supports entrepreneur Michael Basch. A notable 23% are undecided.

When asked who Democrats' second choice would be, Quinn tops the list with 19%. Mayor de Blasio and Stringer receive 13% each, and James garners 11% of the Democratic vote. The rest of the field has support in single digits. A notable 20% are undecided. Of note, 18% of Democrats who support de Blasio say Quinn is their second choice.

"Even in a crowded field, Mayor de Blasio would reach 40% in a Democratic primary and avoid a runoff," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. "None of his potential Democratic challengers has double-digit support."

When the Democratic field is whittled down to just three candidates -- de Blasio, James, and Stringer -- de Blasio's support reaches 47%. He leads James, 17%, and Stringer, 16%, by nearly three to one in this hypothetical Democratic contest.

Mayor de Blasio also outpaces his potential Republican competition in hypothetical general election contests. When matched against businessman John Catsimatidis, registered voters citywide support de Blasio, 66%, over Catsimatidis, 20%. The mayor also leads New York City Councilmember Eric Ulrich, 65% to 18%, among the citywide electorate. Against real estate entrepreneur Paul Massey, de Blasio has 65% to 19% for Massey. The mayor has a similar lead, 64% to 19%, against Reverend Michel J. Faulkner.

Mayor de Blasio's re-election bid is playing out amid federal and state investigations into the mayor's administration. The federal investigation involves a non-profit organization, Campaign for One New York, which is connected to the de Blasio administration. The investigation probes whether donors with city business received an unfair advantage to gain contracts over those who donated less money or none at all. Do New Yorkers think the mayor did anything wrong? While a notable 25% of adults in the city are unsure, half, 50%, report de Blasio did something wrong. Included here are 17% who think de Blasio did something illegal and 33% who say he did something unethical but not illegal. Only 25% report Mayor de Blasio did nothing wrong. When it comes to the mayor's aides, a majority of residents, 53%, think they either did something illegal, 23%, or something unethical but not illegal, 30%. 17% believe Mayor de Blasio's aides did nothing wrong, and a notable 29% are unsure.

On the state level, Mayor de Blasio and his aides face accusations which allege they violated campaign finance laws in an attempt to help Democrats get elected to the New York State Senate. Here, a plurality of residents, 46%, think de Blasio either did something illegal, 17%, or something unethical but not illegal, 29%. 32% say the mayor did nothing wrong, and a notable 22% are unsure. When it comes to the culpability of his aides, a majority, 52%, think de Blasio's staff either did something illegal, 22%, or something unethical but not illegal, 30%. 22% believe they did nothing wrong, and more than one in four, 26%, are unsure.

Do these allegations hurt the mayor's chances for re-election? If there is an indictment of one or more of the mayor's aides, 51% of voters either say it would not matter very much, 24%, or would not matter at all, 27%, in their vote. 44% report it would impact their vote either a great deal, 27%, or a good amount, 17%. Five percent are unsure.

"There is concern about the state and federal investigations and what they might reveal about the conduct of Mayor de Blasio and his aides," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. "So far, the discussion has not spilled over to harm his re-election prospects, but the potential exists for problems down the road."

Mayor de Blasio's strong re-election chances are despite his underwhelming job approval rating. 39% of New York City registered voters rate de Blasio's performance as either excellent, 10%, or good, 29%. In contrast, nearly six in ten, 58%, describe the mayor's job performance as either fair, 36%, or poor, 22%. Four percent are unsure. Mayor de Blasio's approval rating is little changed from the 40% score he achieved last October.

Mayor de Blasio's approval rating is fueled, in large part, by African American voters, 52%, who think he is performing well in his post. Of note, among the 36% who rate de Blasio as doing a "fair" job, 51% view him favorably, and only 38% see him unfavorably.

How the Survey was Conducted

Nature of the Sample: NBC 4 NY/Marist Poll of 888 New York City Adults

This survey of 888 New York City adults was conducted February 21st through February 27th, 2017 by The Marist Poll sponsored and funded in partnership with NBC 4 New York. Adults 18 years of age and older residing in New York City were interviewed in English or Spanish by telephone using live interviewers. Landline telephone numbers were randomly selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the city from ASDE Survey Sampler, Inc. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each borough was represented in proportion to its population. Within each landline household, a single respondent is selected through a random selection process to increase the representativeness of traditionally under-covered survey populations. To increase coverage, this landline sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of mobile phone numbers from Survey Sampling International. Mobile phones are treated as individual devices. After validation of age, personal ownership, and non-business-use of the mobile phone, interviews are typically conducted with the person answering the phone. The samples were then combined and balanced to reflect the 2013 American Community Survey 5-year estimates for age, gender, income, and borough, except for race, which is from the 2010 census. Results for adults are statistically significant within ± 3.3 percentage points. There are 636 registered voters. Results for this subset are statistically significant within ± 3.9 percentage points. There are 409 registered Democrats. Results for this subset are statistically significant within ± 4.8 percentage points. The error margin was not adjusted for sample weights and increases for cross-tabulations.

		There is currently a federal investigation into a non-profit, called Campaign for One New York, connected with Mayor de Blasio's administration. Money was raised from major donors, some of whom have business with the city. The investigation is about whether or not those who donated were given an unfair advantage in their business with the city over those who did not donate as much money or did not donate at all. 		There is currently a New York State investigation into whether or not Mayor de Blasio or his aides violated state election law when they raised money for Democratic candidates running for New York State Senate in 2014. The investigation is about whether or not de Blasio or his staff went around campaign finance limits by steering donations through local county committees. Do you think Bill de Blasio, himself:
