This MSNBC/Telemundo/Marist Poll reports:

Pope Francis will arrive in the United States tomorrow, following his trip to Cuba. So, what do Americans think of the Holy Father? And, what are their attitudes toward the United States' relationship with Cuba?

A majority of Americans, 51%, including nearly half of Latinos, 49%, have a positive opinion of Pope Francis. But, the Pontiff is not viewed negatively by Americans. Rather, notable proportions of residents, including Latinos, do not have an opinion one way or the other, or do not know enough about Pope Francis to weigh in. During his visit, nearly half of Americans, including Latinos, would prefer Pope Francis speak about social issues and economic policy and not just about religion and faith.

Most American Catholics have a favorable impression of the Holy Father including more than eight in ten Catholics who practice their faith. In fact, a majority of practicing Catholics believe Pope Francis has made them feel closer to their faith.

When it comes to the United States' relationship with Cuba, more than six in ten Americans, approve of opening up diplomatic relations with the country. This now includes more than two in three Latinos who share this view, an increase from a poll conducted earlier this year. Many residents and Latinos, alike, also support lifting the U.S. embargo against Cuba to permit travel to the nation. Latinos are more interested than Americans, as a whole, to want to personally travel to the country.

Poll Points: Perceptions of Pope Francis

- 51% of Americans, including 49% of Latinos, have a positive impression of Pope Francis. Less than one in ten Americans, 9%, and Latinos, 7%, has a negative

*All references to the survey must be sourced as "MSNBC/Telemundo/Marist Poll."

- impression of the Holy Father. More than one in five residents, 27%, including 28% of Latinos has neither a positive nor negative opinion of Pope Francis.
- 68% of Catholic Latinos have a favorable view of the Holy Father, including 75% of Catholic Latinos who practice their faith.
 - 49% of Americans would like Pope Francis to address social and economic policy during his upcoming trip to the United States. 36% say he should focus entirely on religion and faith. The views of Latinos reflect those of the overall public. 48% of Latinos report Pope Francis should speak to social issues and economic policy while 38% say he should stick to religion and faith.
 - A majority of Catholics, 51%, want Pope Francis to address more than just religion and their faith. Practicing Catholics divide. 47% would like the Pontiff to speak to broader issues, and 45% believe he should address only religion and faith.
 - 45% of American Catholics report Pope Francis has made them feel closer to their faith, including 53% of practicing Catholics. Among Catholic Latinos, nearly half, 49%, say they have a stronger bond with their faith because of Pope Francis, including 57% of Catholic Latinos who practice their faith.

Poll Points: Diplomatic Relations with Cuba

- 62% of Americans, including 67% of Latinos, approve of providing diplomatic recognition of Cuba by the United States. While there has been little change among Americans, overall, on this question since April, more Latinos support this change in U.S. policy. In April, 56% of Latinos supported opening up diplomatic relations with Cuba.
- About two-thirds of adults nationally, 66%, including 70% of Latinos, think the U.S. embargo against Cuba should be lifted to allow for U.S. trade and tourism.
- Americans divide about whether or not they would like to travel to Cuba if the embargo were lifted. 49% say they would not really want to travel to the country while 48% would. Among Latinos, 64% report they would like to go to Cuba.

How the Survey was Conducted

Nature of the Sample: MSNBC/Telemundo/Marist Poll of 1,689 National Adults

This survey of 1,689 adults was conducted August 26th through September 9th, 2015 by The Marist Poll sponsored and funded in partnership with MSNBC and Telemundo. Adults 18 years of age and older residing in the continental United States were interviewed in English or Spanish by telephone using live interviewers. Landline telephone numbers were randomly selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the nation from ASDE Survey Sampler, Inc. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each region was represented in proportion to its population. Respondents in the household were selected by asking for the youngest male. To increase coverage, this landline sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of cell phone numbers from Survey Sampling International. A random oversample of Latinos, with assistance from SSRS, resulted in a total sample size of 432 Latino respondents. The samples were combined and balanced to reflect the 2013 American Community Survey 1-year estimates for age, gender, income, race, and region. Results are statistically significant within ± 2.4 percentage points for adults. There are 1,115 registered voters. The results for this subset are statistically significant within ± 2.9 percentage points. The results for the subset of 432 Latinos are statistically significant within ± 4.7 percentage points. The error margin was not adjusted for sample weights and increases for cross-tabulations.
