This Marist Poll Reports:

Most Voters Don't Want Paterson to Resign But Question His Ability to Govern

In the wake of a political scandal that ended Governor David Paterson's hopes of a full elected term in office, most registered voters in New York State -- 66% -- say they want the governor to finish out his term in office. Only 28% are calling for Paterson's resignation. 6% are unsure.

But, do they think Governor Paterson will be able to govern effectively? 62% of voters in New York State think, if the governor does not resign, he will not be an effective leader during the remainder of his term. This includes 39% who believe he will not be very effective and 23% who say he will not be effective at all. On the flip side, 34% think he'll be able to fulfill his responsibilities as governor during the next ten months. Included here are 7% who report the governor will be very effective and 27% who say he will be effective.

"When it comes to Governor Paterson resigning from office, New Yorkers are willing to give him the benefit of the doubt," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. "But, regarding his ability to govern effectively, voters have plenty of doubts."

Most Voters Aware of Scandal...View Paterson's Role As Wrong

The current controversy facing Paterson focuses on a possible domestic violence case against one of the governor's top aides. And, unfortunately for Paterson, the electorate has not been insulated from the headlines. 82% of registered voters report they have heard about the case while 18% have not.

What do voters think about Paterson's actions when he spoke with the alleged victim leading up to her court appearance? 40% think he acted unethically but not illegally while 18% feel he acted illegally. Just 12% believe he did nothing wrong, and 30% are unsure.

But, is the governor being treated fairly? 55% of registered voters statewide say he is while 36% think he is getting a raw deal.

Paterson's Job Approval Rating Low But Steady

Governor Paterson's already low job approval rating has been little affected by the news of the scandal. In a Marist Poll conducted just last night, 23% say Paterson is doing either an excellent or good job in office. 33% think he is doing an average job, and 38% believe he is completely missing the mark. 6% are unsure.

When Marist asked about Mr. Paterson's job approval rating in the days leading up to his announcement last Friday, 24% of registered voters statewide thought he was doing either an excellent or good job in office. 40% said he was doing an average job, and 32% reported he was performing poorly. 4% were unsure.

New York's Next Governor? Richard Ravitch's Job Approval Rating

If Governor Paterson steps down, Lieutenant Governor Richard Ravitch will take over the reins of the state. What do voters think of his job performance? 44% have either never heard of him or are unsure how to rate him. 15% think he is doing either an excellent or good job in office, and 29% report he is performing fairly well. 12% say he is doing a poor job.

Two-Thirds Approve of Cuomo's Job Performance

Now that Governor David Paterson has withdrawn his bid for governor, New York's Attorney General Andrew Cuomo appears to have a clear path to his party's nomination if he chooses to run for the state's highest office.

Cuomo's job approval rating stands at 67% among registered voters in New York State, an increase of five percentage points since Marist's last statewide survey in early February. 22% of voters currently say he is doing a fair job while 6% think Cuomo is performing poorly in office. 5% are unsure.

"Attorney General Cuomo has the highest approval rating of any statewide office holder. These are the kind of numbers that would encourage his gubernatorial bid. It's his to lose," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion.

In Marist's February survey, 62% of the electorate gave Cuomo high marks. 26% reported he was doing an average job, and 6% thought Cuomo was performing poorly. 6% were unsure.

Cuomo Trounces Lazio in Hypothetical Contest

How does Cuomo fare when pitted against potential Republican gubernatorial candidate Rick Lazio? 64% of registered voters statewide say they would support Cuomo while 28% report they would back Lazio. 8% are unsure. Little has changed since Marist last asked this question in early February.

Along party lines, not surprisingly, Democratic voters overwhelmingly back Cuomo with 88% reporting they would cast their ballot for him. And, he receives majority support -- 55% -- of non-enrolled voters. Cuomo even nets more than a third -- 35% -- of Republican voters.

Jobs Top Issue Facing the Next Governor

New York State voters have spoken. Once the dust from this year's gubernatorial race in New York settles, nearly three in ten members of the electorate -- 29% -- want the next governor's top priority to be jobs. An additional 18% think economic development should be the highest item on the governor's "to do" list. 17% say taxes should be issue number one. Education receives 12%, and health care rounds out the top five with 10%.

New York State in Need of New Compass

More than three-quarters of the state's electorate -- 76% -- think New York is headed in the wrong direction. 18%, however, believe it's on the right course.

Voters' pessimism is not new. When Marist asked this question early last month, 74% reported the state is on the wrong path while 21% disagreed with that assessment.

How the Survey was Conducted:

This release presents findings from two, separate surveys.

The first survey of 646 New York State registered voters was conducted on February 22nd and, due to snow, February 24th, 2010. Registered voters were interviewed by telephone in proportion to the voter registration in each county in New York and adjusted for turnout in statewide elections. Telephone numbers were selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the state. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each region was represented in proportion to its population. In an effort to increase coverage, this land-line sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of cell phone numbers. The land-line and cell phone samples were then combined. Results are statistically significant at ±4.0%. The error margin increases for cross-tabulations.

The second survey of 543 New York State registered voters was conducted on March 1st, 2010 after Governor Paterson announced he would not seek election as governor this year. Registered voters were interviewed by telephone in proportion to the voter registration in each county in New York and adjusted for turnout in statewide elections. Telephone numbers were selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the state. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each region was represented in proportion to its population. In an effort to increase coverage, this land-line sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of cell phone numbers. The land-line and cell phone samples were then combined. Results are statistically significant at ±4.5%. The error margin increases for cross-tabulations.
