This Marist Poll Reports:

Cuomo Viewed As “Solution”... Approval Rating on the Rebound

Registered voters in New York State think Attorney General Andrew Cuomo could be the person to chart a new course for the state. According to the latest Marist Poll in New York, 66% of voters say, if Cuomo is elected governor, he would more likely be part of the solution to turning state government around than part of the problem. 22% report he is more likely to be part of the problem. 12% are unsure.

“Voters are looking for someone who can turn state government around, and most plan to look no farther than Andrew Cuomo,” says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion.

This perception of Cuomo crosses party lines. Not surprisingly, 74% of Democrats see Cuomo as someone who can help improve state government and even half of Republicans say the same. Looking at non-enrolled voters statewide, 71% believe Cuomo would be more likely to be a solution to the state’s problems than part of their cause.

Cuomo Approval Rating at 61%

After a drop earlier this month prior to Cuomo’s recusal from investigating Governor Paterson, Cuomo’s job approval rating has taken a turn for the better. 61% of voters say Cuomo is doing either an excellent or good job in office. 26% report he is doing a fair job, and just 8% think he is performing poorly. An additional 5% are unsure.

In Marist’s March 9th survey, Cuomo’s approval rating stood at 54%. 31% thought he was doing a fair job, and 8% thought he was off target. 7% were unsure.

"Attorney General Cuomo may have stubbed his toe briefly during the investigation of Governor Paterson, but he is back on his feet again and poised to start running for governor," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion.

Cuomo with Wide Lead Against Lazio, Levy

Although Cuomo has yet to toss his proverbial hat into the gubernatorial ring, speculation about a possible candidacy is high. Should Cuomo decide to run, to say he is well-positioned is an understatement. When pitted against Republican candidate, former U.S. Representative Rick Lazio, Cuomo leads Lazio, 61% to 30%, respectively. 9% are unsure.

When Marist last posed this hypothetical contest to voters in its March 2nd poll, 64% of registered voters said they would cast their ballot for Cuomo while 28% thought they would support Lazio. 8% were unsure.

Suffolk County Executive Steve Levy recently announced he will switch parties and will seek the Republican nomination for governor. How does he stack up against Cuomo? Here, Cuomo enjoys a slightly wider lead. He receives 65% of voters' support compared with 26% for Levy. 9% are unsure.

Lazio Pick of GOP Majority

In the race for the Republican nomination for governor, Rick Lazio receives majority support from his party's rank-and-file members. 53% of the state's GOP voters report they would support Lazio if the primary were held today while just 21% report they would back Levy. 26%, however, are unsure.

Voters Bash Paterson on Budget... Job Approval Rating Scraping Bottom

With New York State's budget deadline looming, how do registered voters statewide think Governor David Paterson is handling the state's budget? Nearly two-thirds -- 64% -- disapprove of the governor's budgetary skills while 28% approve. 8% are unsure.

Voters' dissatisfaction with the governor on this issue has grown since Marist last asked it earlier this month. In its March 9th survey, 58% of voters panned Paterson's fiscal ability compared with 35% who applauded it. 7% were unsure.

"Paterson may have nixed his election plans in order to govern New York, but voters aren't buying it," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. "His numbers remain at historic lows."

Although Paterson's ranking on the budget is low, it's not as low as his overall job approval rating. Overwhelmingly, voters disapprove of how he is doing as governor. Just 17% believe he is doing either an excellent or good job in office. This proportion matches his lowest approval rating which he received last September. Currently, 39% say he is doing a fair job, and another 41% think he is performing poorly. Just 3% are unsure.

When Marist last asked about the governor's approval rating in its March 9th poll, 19% gave him high marks, 43% said he was doing an average job, and 36% reported he was performing poorly. 2% were unsure.

"Pass Budget On Time," Say 59% of Voters

Nearly six in ten members of the statewide electorate -- 59% -- think it is imperative that the New York State budget be passed by its April 1st deadline. This includes 32% who say that meeting the deadline matters a great deal and 27% who report it means a good amount to them. On the other hand, it matters little to 23% of voters and not at all to 16%. 2% are unsure.

Although Republicans place greater importance on passing the budget on time, a majority of Democrats agree. 68% of Republicans say approving the budget by next Thursday matters either a great or good amount to them while 55% of Democrats say the same. 58% of non-enrolled voters share this view.

Poor Ratings for NYS Senate and Assembly

Governor Paterson isn't the only one in the doghouse among New York voters. The State Senate and Assembly aren't faring better. 83% of voters aren't happy with the Senate's performance including nearly half -- 48% -- who say it is performing poorly and 35% who report it is doing a fair job. Just 14% believe the Senate is doing either an excellent or good job in office. 3% are unsure.

Little has changed on this question from when Marist last asked it in its March 3rd poll.

As for the State Assembly, 83% are dissatisfied with its job performance. This includes 47% who say it is doing a poor job and 36% who believe the job it is doing is just fair. Only 13% think it is doing either an excellent or good job in office. 4% are unsure. Here, too, little has changed since Marist's previous poll.

Dismal View of the Direction of State

With the low approval ratings of Governor Paterson, the State Senate, and the State Assembly, it's not surprising that voters think the state needs to be re-directed.

Nearly eight in ten members of the electorate -- 78% -- say the state is headed in the wrong direction. This is the greatest proportion of voters in decades who think the direction of the state needs to be changed. The figure has been ticking up since Paterson took office in 2008. When Marist last asked it in its March 2nd survey, 76% thought the state should alter its course.

In fact, voters are so dissatisfied with state government that 71% report major changes are needed, and another 15% think minor changes are needed. 13% believe the situation is so bad that state government is broken and beyond repair. Only 1% report no changes are needed.

When Marist last asked this question in February, 67% thought major changes were needed, and 21% reported minor changes would fix the problems in state government. 12% said the way things are done in state government were broken and beyond repair, and fewer than 1% believed no change was called for.

Ravitch's Name Recognition Grows

The recent scandals focusing on Governor Paterson have drawn Lieutenant Governor Richard Ravitch into the public's view, and more voters have formed an opinion about his job performance.

Although 29% of voters statewide still say they have either never heard of or are unsure how to rate Ravitch, that proportion has fallen since Marist's March 9th survey. At that time, 41% did not have a clear impression of him.

So, where does his approval rating stand? 25% currently report Ravitch is doing an excellent or good job in office, 35% think he is doing a fair job, and 11% say he is performing poorly. Earlier this month, 21% thought he was executing his duties at an above average level, 30% believed Ravitch was doing an average job, and 8% believed he was falling short.

DiNapoli Approval Rating Dips

New York State Comptroller Tom DiNapoli has consistently struggled to make inroads with the state's electorate, and the news has gotten worse.

29% currently believe the comptroller is doing either an excellent or good job in office. This is a decrease from Marist's March 3rd survey when 34% gave him a thumbs-up. 31% now say he is doing a fair job, and 9% believe he is performing poorly. And, 31% have either never heard of him or are unsure how to rate him. When Marist last asked about DiNapoli, 30% said he was doing an average job, 9% thought he was performing below average, and 27% were unsure.

Nature of the Sample: 775 New York State Registered Voters

This survey of 775 New York State registered voters was conducted on March 23rd and March 24th, 2010. Registered voters were interviewed by telephone in proportion to the voter registration in each county in New York and adjusted for turnout in statewide elections. Telephone numbers were selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the state. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each region was represented in proportion to its population. In an effort to increase coverage, this land-line sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of cell phone numbers. The land-line and cell phone samples were then combined. Results are statistically significant at $\pm 3.5\%$. There are 217 Republicans. The results for this subset are statistically significant at $\pm 7.0\%$. The error margin increases for cross-tabulations
