This McClatchy-Marist Poll Reports:

76% of Americans approve of U.S. air strikes in Syria against ISIS. But, if those air strikes fail, Americans divide about whether or not to put U.S. boots on the ground. Although Republicans are more likely to support military action, including air strikes and sending ground troops to the region, Democrats are more likely to trust the president to work well with allies, avoid a terror attack in the United States, make the right decisions, act quickly, and develop a sound strategy. Republicans are more inclined to describe ISIS as a major threat to the U.S. Majorities of Democrats and independents, though, share this view.

46% of registered voters nationally approve of the job President Obama is doing in office, up from 40% who held this view in August. Voters' impressions of his handling of foreign policy have also improved from 33% in August to 46% now.

Overall, a majority of voters rate the president positively on his handling of the threat of terrorism. They are divided about his handling of ISIS and Ukraine.

Concern among Americans about a terror attack in the U.S. is at its highest. But, so is confidence in the government's ability to prepare and protect communities throughout the nation. By nearly two to one, Americans believe the country is safer now than it was before the attacks on September 11th, 2001.

"President Obama's standing among voters has improved, especially in foreign policy," says Dr. Lee M. Miringoff, Director of The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. "But, he is walking a fine line between Republicans who support air strikes and want more military action and Democrats who support the president but are fearful of an escalation of U.S. involvement in the region.”

Poll points:

- 76% of Americans approve of U.S. air strikes against ISIS in Syria, and 19% disapprove. The action has broad support including 92% of Republicans, 75% of Democrats, and 73% of independents.
- 47% of adults nationally favor sending U.S. ground troops to Syria to fight ISIS if air strikes are unsuccessful. 48%, though, oppose putting boots on the ground. Partisan differences exist. 67% of Republicans support establishing a ground force in the region while only 34% of Democrats share this view.
- 60% of Americans have, at least, a good amount of trust in Mr. Obama to work well with U.S. allies to combat ISIS. Majorities also trust the president to prevent a future terror attack in the U.S., 54%, make the right decisions in the war against ISIS, 53%, and to act quickly to fight ISIS, 51%. Half of Americans, 50%, have, at least, a good amount of confidence in Obama to come up with a sound strategy. There is a wide partisan divide on these questions. Democrats overwhelmingly have confidence in the president. About half of independents share this view, but most Republicans are wary.
- Nearly all Americans, 94%, consider ISIS a threat to U.S. security. Included are 58% who report ISIS is a major threat to the nation’s safety. Republicans, 72%, and independents, 60%, are more likely than Democrats, 52%, to say ISIS is a major threat.

Obama’s Performance Rating Improves

- 52% of the nation’s voters approve of how President Obama is handling terrorism. 44% disapprove.
- Registered voters divide about how President Obama is handling ISIS. 48% approve, and 46% disapprove.
- When it comes to how the president is dealing with the conflict in Ukraine, 46% of voters approve of his approach. 44% disapprove. Concern About Terror Attack at Highest Point But So is Confidence in Preparedness

- 84% of Americans are concerned about the potential for another terror attack in the U.S. including 41% who are very concerned and 43% who are concerned. In 2003, 22% of Americans were very concerned, and 54% expressed concern (Trend).
- 69% of Americans believe the U.S. is prepared for future aggression by terrorists on U.S. soil (Trend). 67% say they are confident the government will be able to protect their local area from a terror attack. 58% of Americans held this view in 2002 (Trend).
- 64% of Americans think the U.S. is safer now than it was on September 11, 2001.

How the Survey was Conducted

Nature of the Sample: McClatchy-Marist National Poll of 1,052 Adults

This survey of 1,052 adults was conducted September 24th through September 29th, 2014 by The Marist Poll sponsored in partnership with the McClatchy News Service. Adults 18 years of age and older residing in the continental United States were interviewed by telephone using live interviewers. Landline telephone numbers were randomly selected based upon a list of telephone exchanges from throughout the nation from ASDE Survey Sampler, Inc. The exchanges were selected to ensure that each region was represented in proportion to its population. To increase coverage, this landline sample was supplemented by respondents reached through random dialing of cell phone numbers from Survey Sampling International. The two samples were then combined and balanced to reflect the 2010 Census results for age, gender, income, race, and region. Respondents in the household were selected by asking for the youngest male. Results are statistically significant within ± 3.0 percentage points. There are 884 registered voters. The results for this subset are statistically significant within ± 3.3 percentage points. The error margin increases for cross-tabulations.
